

I believe that Cellular providers should allow number portability. The consumers often are "stuck" with their provider even if it doesn't provide good service because they don't want to switch their phone numbers. Changes in plans and pricing occur all the time and consumers should be able to take advantage of the competitive pricing without the inconvenience of informing all of their contacts that their number has changed.